Tropical Air Hockey (also known as Air Hockey Tropical, Small Air Hockey, Round Air Hockey, Hurricane Air Hockey and Tornado Air Hockey or simply Tropical Air Hockey) is the most popular small size air hockey. Unlike traditional air hockey, players put their helmets on their head instead of using a stick. It is specially designed for indoor usage. Tropical Air Hockey is a traditional indoor game of skill and tactics. It is also a very exciting and progressive game that uses large stacks of moka to create a more exciting game. Although Tropical Air Hockey is played indoors, it is not for children. Unlike the game of regular air hockey, there is no puck, and in place of a stick, players use their helmets to hit a moving circular disk made out of stacks of moka. It is a fast paced game with many exciting moves and tactical plays. This instrument is played indoors on a long oval like playing field with painted lines on the floor. Air Hockey (or Aim to Fly) is a traditional indoor game of skill and tactics that requires two players to hit a rotating circular disk, or puck, with a small ball attached to a string in order to score a point for the players of each opposing team. The game is played on a very long and narrow floor made by the moka that are arranged in rows that follow a diagonal line. The initial players are required to be inside one part of the long floor formed by the row of moka and then the opposing players must hit the puck coming from either the left or the right, and it is only optional to use one side. Many variations of the game exist but the usual rules are these. At the completion of every round, the first player, named the "captain" or "puck keeper" of the team, begins the round by hitting the puck towards the middle of the floor, taking the maximum number of rotations of the moka disk. The second player or "coach" of the team takes the position of the board on the floor, facing the second and final player. Their job is to read the moves and controlled movements of their teammate and to score for them when the puck reaches the half pole part of the floor on their side of the floor. Now the second player can stand up on the floor and place the bamboo stick in the manner of walking on a foot path or a circle-of-courtyard. After hitting the puck with the stick, he needs to instruct the captain to remove the disk of moka Astalift is an indie WiiWare Game developed by Akumu Games. EarthBound 2 82% EarthBound 2 is a re-release of the widely popular Nintendo Gameboy game. Originally released in 1994 by Nintendo, EarthBound 2 is a character-driven side-scrolling RPG for Game Boy Color, which was released in Europe on April 20th 2006. The game was created by Shigesato Itoi, a Japanese video game designer, director, music composer and animator known for many of his creations, including the Mother series and the Dragon Quest series.

EarthBound 2 (地球Bound2, Esu Bōn2) is a re-release of the famous SNES game of the same name. It is notable for popularizing the "party game" concept. Gameplay The gameplay is rather similar to the original EarthBound, but it incorporates several changes. Most notable of these is the ability to save at no fewer than three savepoints, giving the player at most three replays of the game (and a fourth, bonus replay) with which to play through the game. Also, two new characters called Jiromaru and Bubbles were added to the cast, with new items, new Final Fantasy-like transformations (much like "Thunder God" and "Imperial Knight" in the original game), a new weapon called the Amulet of Yotsuya, and a new location called the Magic Tower. Story The game opens up with a flashback to the events of the original EarthBound. Ness once again meets Warren the Shy Guy and accidentally brings out his power-up.
