Open it, Ctrl+A and choose Save. Another thing you can do is to. When you close XPaint, you'll be asked where you want to save the image. Of course you can, you can open it where you want, click "Save" and export it where you want. Also, when you want to export, you can go to the preview pane, where the image is and right click to export it. Also, if you only want to export the image for your first try on XPaint, with a snapshot of the window that will be opened, use Ctrl+A and select "Save Screenshot", without saving the image. You can also make a snapshot for your first try, and then export it. JupiterJBTB wrote: I just had a thought - what if I reinstall XP, am I able to use the same.ini file? Yes, as long as you do not modify it. Tried the snapshot and double click/drag and drop method to no avail. Is there a way to do this without any.ini file?
