These included "This is how you can increase your brain size and even IQ", "Would you believe these eating trends will enlarge your brain" and "Why you should not eat these 10 foods" to name a few. As we're sure you've noticed, the feedback has been quite positive for these articles. However, we received a variety of responses, ranging from positive to negative. We're very happy with the outcome of these articles, but we would like to see a more balanced approach in the future. Therefore, we have decided to revisit this subject. Here are five health beliefs and dietary trends that might actually work in your favor. #1 - Dieting causes weight loss.

The idea that the faster you lose weight, the less calories you will eat in the future is what many people use to justify putting themselves on a diet. However, studies show that those who diet are more likely to gain the weight back than keep it off. #2 - Only high-protein diets work. We've heard this one many times.

How would you feel if somebody tells you that, by reducing your carb intake, you will actually lose weight faster? Sounds good, right? Well, it's wrong. Dietary protein and fat both have equal importance when it comes to calorie intake. #3 - Eating processed foods is good for your health. A study of 43,000 women in the UK revealed that women who ate processed foods or a wholemeal diet had a lower risk of developing dementia. There were only two categories that posed a higher risk of developing dementia: refined carbohydrate diets and 6d1f23a050
